

Queen duped by BBC and Sky news scam

In the UK, the Queen, with her New Year Honours', has awarded the CERN Scientist Peter Higgs, the physicist who first suggested the existence of the Higgs boson particle, the 'Order of the Companions of Honour' in recognition of his theory that the Higgs boson actually exists, following much talk in July 2012.

But the particle has still yet to be discovered: On 4th July, 2012, at 0800 the BBC and Sky News reported that CERN had announced that it had found 'the strongest possible evidence yet for the existence of the Higgs-Boson particle'. Or, to be clear: 'CERN did not announce that it had 'found' the Higgs-Boson Particle'. But, by noon on the same day, the BBC and Sky had both changed the story to 'Higgs boson particle discovered', which was a lie.

Indeed, in a TV Interview [Spotlight, with Al Gurnov, Russian TV (Sky 512) 3rd July 2012—12 hours prior to the 4th July 'announcement'] the Director General of CERN, Rolf-Dieter Heuer, stated, quite categorically "the only thing we don't know about the Higgs Boson particle is whether or not it exists".

Moreover, 'the strongest possible evidence yet' exists to show that these so-called 'particles' CERN refer to, are actually being manufactured inside particle accelerators [see FUTURESCIENCE—forbidden science of the 21st-century, Maurice Cotterell, Celtic Press, 2011]. That is to say, they are a result of experimental error.

Unlike FUTURESCIENCE, the so-called Standard Model, of Particle Physics, cannot even explain why objects fall to the ground (how gravity works), how Electricity works at atomic level—why an electric current produces a magnetic field—or even why a permanent magnet sticks to the 'fridge. door.

The duplicity behind the media scam continued [The Daily Telegraph 29 December 2012: Science, reporting on the Queen's award to Higgs]: 'CERN announced that they had discovered a subatomic particle consistent with the Higgs boson. [Note; consistent means 'not contradictory'. It does not mean 'the same as'].

It is believed that this is the first time the Queen has been duped into making an award for a theory that has not been proven.

But why let the truth get in the way of a good story.
